

“Media Literacy: A System for Learning, provides teachers with a reliable method for helping students gain information processing skills while also mastering content knowledge. Built around CML’s research-based framework, Questions/TIPS (Q/TIPS), a concise and clear method for creating lessons and curricula is included, as well as e-books explaining how 21st Century curricula differs from the lessons of the past, professional development modules for the corresponding parts and Tools for Implementation.”

Tessa Jolls

Graduate School Action Research Co-op project Survey

This survey is about getting a better understanding of how Media Literacies can be used effectively in learning communities.

Since the most important part of any learning opportunity are the expected out comes we want to get an understanding of what people think about Media Literacies as defined on the introduction page.

- 1.) Have you experienced media literacy assignments used effectively across the learning environments?

☐ yes

☐ no

- 2.) How much are you, or others you work with, interested in exploring Media Literacies in the classroom?

None

☐

Some

☐

Neutral

☐

Very

☐

Excited

☐

- 3.) Most instructors are familiar with grading written assignments, do you feel grading new media literacies are different to grade. For example, would a new set of rubrics help with the evaluation process?

No different

☐

Some

☐

Neutral

☐

Different

☐

Very Different

☐

- 4.) Instructors may not be comfortable with the tools of Media Literacies. What areas do you think instructors will need the most help with to accomplish quality assignments?

5.) Do you see an opportunity to work with other institutions using Media Literacies and dedicated high speed networks?

☐ yes

☐ no

Please provide your email address if you are interested in further discussion

If you have questions about this survey please contact Karl Carter kec49@drexel.edu

Tessa , J. (2012, 11 11). Media literacy: A system for learning anytime, anywhere.

Retrieved from <http://www.medialit.org/media-literacy-system-learning-anytime-anywhere>
